NEASTERN UNITED STATES—FALL, 2030

This Eastern Division news is provided for quick reference to major roads and Fortress towns. For detailed information about any city, check the AAA's North American Road Atlas and Survival Guide, available at any bookstore, truck stop, or AAA office.

ALBANY, NY

The capital of New York has strict dist-control ordinances, but local drivers are welcome. Visit the Albany Motorplex for a spectator combat. Those less than successful in these endeavors, repair and weapon rentals are available. Be sure to look for the Empire State Plaza Petrol Duffling Center, Albany's most popular attraction.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ

Most travelers visit Atlantic City for its famous casinos—or play "Diego" along the boardwalk. But some lucky duelists pass Go for a spectator combat. Those less than successful in these endeavors, repair and weapon rentals are available. Be sure to look for the Empire State Plaza Petrol Duffling Center, Albany's most popular attraction.

AAA, INC.

BALTIMORE, MD

AAA's most popular division, this city should confine their travels to the relatively safe downtown area. The suburbs, hard hit in the Gold Cross, are unsafe for travel at any time, though individual vehicles in Division 20 or greater may venture outside. Be sure to look for the Baltimore Petrol Duffling Center, the site of the original live "Shootout" game; tickets are available at the Fitzsimmons Sports Office.

BOSTON, MA

Massachusetts is a capital—once an historic site, it was nearly leveled by the Gold Cross. It is now one of America's most modern cities. Boston boasts no ordinary weapon shop, but Uncle Albert's catalog showroom. Full closing facilities are available in Boston Gold Cross. There are three AAA stations in the city, and the Boston Petrol Duffling Center is the best, but city championships move to the New Boston Dueling Arenas because of its larger capacity. New car buyers can also check out the Finest Motors Auto Showroom.

AAA, INC.

BUFFALO, NY

Visitors of the city will want to check out the Buffalo Municipal Coliseum, still under construction. This project has been plagued by delays since its inception, but once finished it will be one of the nation's largest. Be sure to visit the weapons show to be fitted in custom accessories.

AAA, INC.

DOVER, DE

Dover is best known for the world-champion Dover Destroyers, scourge of the competition throughout the region. It is also the capital of Delware and the home of the Dover Autoduel Center. Be sure to check out the many samples of many nearly extinct plants such as wheat, orange trees, and poison ivy.

AAA, INC.

HARRISBURG, PA

Harrisburg is the capital of Pennsylvania. The base of a strong militia during the Second Civil War, it remains one of the more peaceful parts of the state, although downtown areas may be unsafe after dark. Harrisburg is the home of the Harrisburg Armored Repair and Salvage, a truck stop famed for hospitality to auto-enthusiasts.

AAA, INC.

MANCHESTER, NH

State government meets here when Concord, the original capital, is visited. Purple Flash in Action, the state's premiere auto club, can tour the plant of Dog Breath, manufacturers of the targeting computers, combat simulation software, and similar dueling gear.

AAA, INC.

NEW YORK CITY, NY

The "Big Apple" hosts the AAA Divisional Championships every six months. The city is a fortress town, so visitors should be careful to the danger to Matrix's latest supercycles, all vehicle damage must be covered or an uninsured downtown—Be careful, because the city militia enforces strict laws.

AAA, INC.

PHILADELPHIA, PA

The "City of Brotherly Love" has neither repair facilities nor a weapon shop but is home to the Patriotic Plots, a shop where one may find rather unusual items. Their planning firm thus through Philadelphia should budget their road trip accordingly. Check in at the AAA office for the latest update on road conditions.

AAA, INC.

PITTSBURGH, PA

With the destruction of Detroit in WWII, Pittsburgh became the center of the steel industry. Most battlefield hardware and heavy equipment can be found in the Allegheny Mountains—call the individual points for your information. Visiting tourists may want to drop in on a meeting of the Allegheny Autoduel Association.

AAA, INC.

PROVIDENCE, RI

Rhode Island's state capital, Providence has no armory, but no feasible weapons can be had from its downtown truck shop. A major Providence tourist attraction is "Aquaduct"—armed spectator combat!

It'll never replace auto-dueling, but it's certainly a thrilling sport.

AAA, INC.

SCRANTON, PA

Scranton is a dying town. Scranton was all but destroyed when the quake of '18 toppled the city into the coal-mine underground. Recruit to the north of the original site. Scranton is now a small but solid Fortress town. The Gold Cross has been here since the early 1900s, and is the East's target private-war corporation. Corporations and special-interest groups come to settle their differences while the nation watches via live TV coverage.

AAA, INC.

SYRACUSE, NY

Syracuse hosts the annual New York State Fair and Combat Exposition every year. The fair is a great place to meet new people, and draw attention to local road and warnings signs. When the fair is over, it is only now getting under way, and abandoned buildings in the downtown area still shelter survivors.

AAA, INC.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Capital of the 47 States, Washington's chief industry has been government for over 250 years. The President of the United States still fires the ceremonial "first shot" in Federal Arenas each year to start the AAA. Other than the Gold Cross, there is little else to see. One of the finest parks and salvaging facilities can be found on the Atlantic coast.

AAA, INC.

WATERTOWN, NY

Watertown, the East Coast's last frontier, is a producer of many exotic items.

AAA, INC.

WATERLOO, IOWA

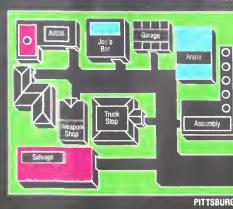

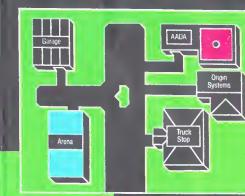

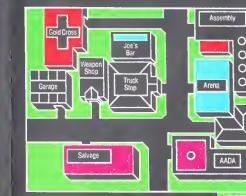

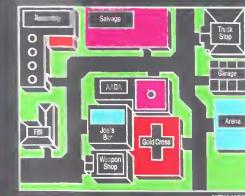

Waterloo is the capital of Iowa. The base of a strong militia during the Second Civil War, it remains one of the more peaceful parts of the state, although downtown areas may be unsafe after dark. Waterloo is the home of the Waterloo Armored Repair and Salvage, a truck stop famed for hospitality to auto-enthusiasts.

AAA, INC.

WILMINGTON, DE

Delaware's capital, Wilmington, is a thriving port city. The Gold Cross has been here since the early 1900s, and is the East's target private-war corporation. Corporations and special-interest groups come to settle their differences while the nation watches via live TV coverage.
